Precon

(From Email)

The pre-con is coming along well! We currently have 20 prepaid members and expect this number to grow significantly at the door. The schedule is just about full up, with 17 1-hour sessions and one 2-hour workshop. I'm [ed: Nat] very proud of our session lineup this year, which includes an author reading, several presentations on topics of interest to LARPer, two interactive design workshops, Q&A, discussion of other LARP conventions, and panels on topics ranging from practical design issues to LARP theory to the intersectionality of societal issues with LARP.

The following panels still have open calls for participants out:

- Prequels and Sequels
- Wait, That Was It? Pacing Issues in LARPs

Several other panels are still seeking participants but have elected not to put out an open call at this time.

One panel, "The Railroad and the Sandbox: Player Freedom and Control," has been subsumed by another panel. This new panel is entitled "Finding the Fun: Game Design for LARP," and will be moderated by Peter Litwack. Player freedom and control will be among the topics discussed there.
